1. A coalition of the five principal Moroccan "nationalist parties" was formed at a secret meeting held in Tangier on 25 October 1946. A committee, to be known as the "National Moroccan Liberation Movement" was created and is composed of a representative from each of these parties. The Islah Nationalist Party under the leadership of Abdaljalek Torres may be admitted to the Nationalist bloc when and if an agreement is reached with this party.
2. The meeting was attended by the following:

Mohammed Makki al-Nasiri	Chairman	President Wahda Party
Moktar Essadik Ahardan	Delegate	Delegate for Shoura Party
Ahmed Ben Seddic	Delegate	Sherif of Berkawa Sect and Party
Abdelatif Sbihi	Delegate	President of the Moroccan Friends of the USA (Roosevelt Club)
Abdeslam Zoukari	Delegate	Delegate for Istiqlal Party

Mahdi Benmuna, sub-secretary of the Islah Party and editor of the party organ Horria, was present but was not admitted to the meeting. He was informed, however, of the principal decisions reached.

* These parties include the Wahda Party (headed by Nasiri); the Shoura Party (led by Mohamed Ben Hassan Uazzani); the Istiqlal Party (under the leadership of Mohamed Allal al-Fassi); the Moroccan Friends of the USA (led by Abdelatif Sbihi); and the Berkawa Sect and Party (headed by Ahmed Ben Seddic).

 Ahardan, editor of La Voix du Maroc, is not a member of the Shoura Party, but was acting as proxy for Mohamed Ben Hassan Uazzani, leader of the Shoura Party.

3. The representatives of these parties decided to launch immediately a secret campaign to raise money for the dispatch and support of permanent missions to the United States, Great Britain and Egypt. Masiri stated that some of the members of such missions would be provided with Iraqi passports inasmuch as the French and Spanish might otherwise prevent their leaving Morocco.
4. In a cable addressed to the UN in New York dated 26 October 1946, Mohamed Bakki al-Masiri, acting for the first time in the name of the National Moroccan Liberation Movement, requested an investigation of the Franquist regime in Morocco, under which "more than a million Moroccans were living in absolute misery, slavery and total isolation". As a result of this action, publication of the Arabic newspaper Wahda (organ of Masiri's party) printed in Tetuan has been prohibited by the Spanish authorities.
5. Another cable, signed by Abdeljalek Torres, leader of the Islah Party, was sent to the UN at the same time, requesting the Secretary-General to bring to the attention of the UN the "unfortunate situation" existing in Spanish Morocco and asking that Spanish Morocco be accorded "freedom and independence under his majesty, the Sultan".
6. Several press telegrams were sent to the Daily Express, Kemsley Press, Reuters and Exchange Telegraph in London when news representatives in Tangier learned that Masiri and Torres had cabled the UN. The representative of the Daily Express received a wire from the London office instructing him to play-down all news concerning Moroccan Nationalists. In his opinion, this order may have originated in the British Foreign Office.
